Sealskin, a new hide from Marine Leather

Friday, 22 June 2012

In keeping with its attention to the needs of the shipowner and to the latest design trends, Marine Leather has just created Sealskin, an ultra-durable and environmentally friendly hide, designed for the external furniture of the most prestigious boats.

Thanks to the careful selection of raw materials and the utmost attention to quality at every stage of tanning, Sealskin was created to withstand the ravages of time and water, rain and harsh weather. The result is a hide that, retains over the years all its characteristics of extreme softness and freshness, in order to make each boat more comfortable and welcoming.

This is why many prestigious international yachting brands have already chosen this product, which is also biodegradable. Sealskin, in fact, is not treated with chemicals or pigments, but tanned with natural products. In addition, the waste from leather processing is being reused for the production of glues or natural fertilizer obtained with a particular disposal of waste.

Sealskin looks compact and smooth to the touch and is available in a wide range of nuances, to best respond to every need of furniture. Natural-looking and sophisticated at the same time, this hide can also be used for the interior. Like all Marine Leather products, Sealskin also is a symbol of the quality and style of the company that is distinguished by three generations of the De Cesare family.
